While his State House service crew was battling a blaze at the state Capitol in Concord Wednesday, Supt. of State House Wendell D. Crowell was doing some fire-fighting of his own at the Delancey Hotel.

CROWELL PERFORMS

BEFORE EXPERTS

Neither blaze caused much damage, but both caused a lot of excitement. The State House fire brought out the Concord Fire Department and attracted hundreds of spectators, but a real gallery of experts showed up to see Superintendent Crowell extinguish a blazing hotel awning. Forty-two visiting fire chiefs and their wives, attending the annual outing of the New Hampshire Fire Chiefs' association, applauded while Mr. Crowell put out the fire. After he had the flames under control, the Hampton Fire Department rolled up in response to three separate box alarms.
