AROUND THE BEACH

Onmun Daymorn

Oh, what a nightmare last night! I was leaning over the rail of a ship and a shark was staring at me, its jaws wide. Each time the ship rolled, I clung tightly to the rail, and saw that enormous shark come nearer and nearer, glaring at me with avid eyes.

That's what thinking about going fishing does to me. I have nightmares. Yesterday I was talking to Captain Bill Dow. "Never been deep-sea fishin'?" he had asked. "Never," I had said abashed. Whereupon, I thrust all thoughts of seasickness away and agreed to go on a fishing trip this morning.

I had packed my lunch the night before, ham sandwiches, a lemon (just in case) and a few pieces of delicious pastry I had secured at the Diamond C Market. The man behind the counter had looked at me a bit skeptically as I bought them and inquired: "Think you'll have the appetite to eat them?" "Sure," I said, outwardly confident, but inwardly quaking.

Oh, everybody gave me advice: Eat a good breakfast, they said, eat crackers, don't think of seasickness, make sure your stomach's in good condition, get Mother What-you-might-call-it's Seasick Pills, bring a lemon. I went into Fallon's for the Seasick Pills, I bought the lemon, I ate a good breakfast in Downer's, I tried to relax.

Somehow all my bravado left me as I stepped into the boat. Here I was embarking on something different! What was this feeling creeping upon me? Shake it away . . . this is not seasickness, this is a mental state.

Say, this was wonderful, I felt fine. The cool air was rushing at me, the soothing roll of the waves was beneath the boat, a line was in my hands.

The hours fled by and the time arrived for the return to shore. With fond possessive eyes I gazed at the solitary cod I had caught after a hard (?) struggle. (Oh Yes? . . . Yes!)

Terra firma at last, my sea legs, and in their stead my landlubber ones.

But wait a minute! What was making the ground go up and down like this? What was making the horizon waver?

Home, trusty feet, and quickly. . .

Resume Morning Calisthenics At Beach

There'll be no more lazy mornings on the sand for Beach visitors.

Promptly at 10 Life Guard William Glynn will summon all those resting comfortably on the sand to the morning calisthenic drill near the Charles T. White Memorial playground. He will put them through their paces in a manner calculated to stir up the most sluggish vacation blood.

The morning drills will be resumed at the request of many vacationists who have enjoyed them in past seasons. After frequent inquiries had been made about them at the Chamber of Commerce office, the directors decided this week to resume the setting up exercises every morning with the exception of Sunday.

New Attractions To Be Booked By Beach Chamber

Every Sunday afternoon throughout the entire summer season, the Hampton Beach Chamber of Commerce will present a new and added attraction from the bandstand, an attraction selected especially for its entertainment value. These attractions will be in addition to the regular band concerts.

Every Monday night there will be a professional star act at 7:30. These acts will be given by the finest talent the Chamber of Commerce can get. Community singing is also planned.

N. H. Plumbers To Hold Outing At Beach August 6

The annual outing of the New Hampshire Association of Master Plumbers will be held at Hampton Beach on Wednesday, August 6, it was announced by J. Vincent Moran, president of the organization.

The all-day program is being arranged by a committee headed by John R. Martin of Milford and officers of the association look forward to the largest attendance in the history of the association, judging by the response already received.

The outing is for master plumbers, members of the auxiliary, friends of both, and guests. The guests will include representatives of the Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Island association. All three of these state bodies were well represented last year and they enjoyed the program to such an extent that more will come this year, they report.

Sports, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning, will feature the morning program. The highlight will be a ball game between the master plumbers and salesmen representing wholesale houses. The plumbers proved they were a little better than the salesmen last year, winning by a score of 10 to 9 and the

Palmer, Aided By Four Errors, Bests Bill Cahill

The Hampton All-Stars eked out a 3-0 victory over a classy beach aggregation last Thursday night at Tuck field in a game which was called at the end of the sixth inning.

What looked like a 0-0 deadlock with a real pitchers' duel in progress was broken up in the last inning when a last strike on young Milt Emery got by Catcher Pat Lessard and Emery reached first, went to second on a sacrifice hit by Vern Dennett, and reached third on another dropped third strike which put Stenstream on base. Emery scored standing up when a third ball got by Lessard, who was having a little difficulty squeezing Cahill's fast ones. Bill White then sent a sharp single through the infield and Tuck White rapped a double into right center scoring Stenstream and brother Bill to make the All Stars' total of 3 runs.

Up until the sixth inning it was a real pitchers' battle between "Beep" Palmer for the All Stars and Bill Cahill for the beach aggregation. Young "Beep" Palmer,

Coast Guardsman Returns To Take Bride Saturday

Carleton Scoville, coast guardsman at the Hampton Beach station who was transferred two months ago for temporary war duty out of Norfolk, Va., made a flying visit here over the week-end to marry Miss Lydia Jones, niece of Police Chief Ralph C. V. Eaton of Seabrook.

Rev. Albert R. Brown of Amesbury, Mass., performed the ceremony Saturday night at the parsonage and the couple left for a two-day trip through the White Mountains. Scoville has to be back in Norfolk Tuesday and his bride will remain with her mother, Mrs. Chester Souther, in Seabrook. She is a beauty shop operator, employed in Newburyport, Mass.

Firemen Put In Busy Week-End

Hampton firemen answered seven calls over the week-end with very little damage resulting from any of the fires.

The first Friday alarm was a call from box 193, for a fire in the town dump on Lafayette road near the Shaw-way. Engine 2 responded. No damage resulted.

At 8:13 p. m., about a half hour after the storm started, there was a call from box 613. A tree on the Landing road, had been struck and set on fire. This was extinguished without property damage. It was in the vicinity of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tillen.

Five minutes later, at 8:18 p. m. an alarm from box 179, Dearborn avenue, brought firemen and apparatus to that section of town where lightning fired grass in the small plot between the Greenman factory and Janvrin's Lumber yard. It was extinguished without property damage.

At 8:44 p. m. a call was sounded for the Carter house on Perkins avenue, which had been struck by lightning. Firemen found no fire on the premises, but the electric light entry into the house was wrecked and the fuse box ruined. The chimney was knocked down.

Last call of the evening came at 9:55 p. m. to fill in at the Salisbury, Mass., station.

On Sunday at 1:51 p. m. a call for a grass fire was telephoned in by a passer-by. The fire was on Brier road, about opposite the ice house of Eugene M. Leavitt in the North Beach section and was thought to have been started by blueberry pickers. No property damage resulted.

At 5:30 p. m. a call was sent out from box 79, corner of Dearborn avenue. A grass fire was burning in the field at the rear of several homes on Dearborn ave. About one-half acre was burned over, but there was no loss to property.

Rye Beach Social Notes

The first week in August will see the opening of a class in Red Cross First Aid under the expert direction of Miss Malvina Hoffman, the noted sculptress. Miss Hoffman has limited the number of members to be in the class as the course will be very intensive and she is desirous of giving the members the amount of attention required to make them skilled in their type of endeavor.

The classes will be held in the morning on Mondays and Thursdays in the Community Hall over the Rye Beach Post Office.
 Rye Beach held its defense drive for aluminum on Friday. The Boy Scouts were the solicitors for this precious metal and they met with much cooperation on the part of the residents.

Miss Josephine How is another member of the Rye Beach group who is contributing very generously to the war work. Under her auspices a sale was held Monday and Tuesday in the Stoneleigh college Playhouse. The decorations were very striking and the colors were red, white and blue as befitted the occasion. Permission to use the charming little theater for this purpose was most graciously given by Dr. Richard D. Currier, president of Stoneleigh college.

Both the Rye Beach and Little Boar's Head Red Cross chapters have been working steadily in connection with war work. The Rye Beach contingent gathers in the Community Hall while the members from North Hampton meet in Mrs. Perry's very attractive fish house at Little Boar's Head.

 All those wishing to enter the Abenaki Club championship tournament must qualify for same on August 2nd. The trophy for this tournament was given last year by Mr. George Carhart, Exeter, N. H. Mr. Carhart won own trophy in the annual club tournament last year.

The local club tennis tournament tennis enthusiasts also began August 2nd. Entrants in the tournament must be members of club and they are requested to register at the club house.

A distinguished visitor to Beach over the past week-end was Col. Frank Knox who was playing golf on Sunday morning. After the game he was present at a large dinner party of Mr. William Harrington of Manchester, N. H., who was entertaining a large group of friends.

Terns, Gulls Back At Shoals, Students From UNH Missing

Officials of the UNH Marine laboratory, which has been operating at the Isles of Shoals for the past 14 years, have been forced to remain ashore this summer because of the extensive defense activities along the coast, but the colonies of birds with which they have become so well acquainted have returned, it was learned.

The marine students have observed the terns and gulls with interest each year. About 10 years ago the tern was being killed off by native islanders who objected to its familiarity. The birds became so numerous, they built their nests close to the houses, causing annoyance.

The university students realized they were a nuisance but hated to see the species become extinct, so they experimented on moving the colony to their island. They gathered the eggs in a basket and placed them in the crevices of the rocks which they hoped would be their new home.

About 150 birds followed the eggs and cared for their young. Then, next spring, 30 pairs of these young returned to their new home to lay eggs, which unhappily were eaten by rats. For the next four or five summers eggs were carried over and again were eaten by rats.

The experiment, however, was rated a success because the fact was established that a colony of terns can be moved, and the natives of the Isles of Shoals became sufficiently interested in them to protect them from becoming extinct.

An interesting change is noted in the colony, too, for 10 years ago there were about 20 pair of rossi-ette terns in the group, a beautiful bird with a reddish glowing breast against a brilliant white plumage. Now these more beautiful birds have multiplied until they are as numerous as the common tern. The Arctic tern also has gradually worked its way down and joined the New Hampshire colony

Retired Coast Guardsman Dies

Thomas B. Sterling, retired coast guardsman, died Saturday at the United States Marine Hospital in Brighton, Mass., after a long illness.

Mr. Sterling was 72 and a native of Portsmouth. In 1903 he entered the Coast Guard under the late Capt. Silas H. Harding, district superintendent, when it was known as the United States Life Saving Service. He was retired April 1, 1933 after nearly 30 years' service. At the time of retiring he held the rank of boatswain's mate first class.

He was a member of the Warrant Officers' association of the 1st Coast Guard district and also was affiliated with the Frank E. Booma post, A. L., of Portsmouth and Seaside council, Jr. O.U.A.M., of Rye.

Car Crashes Into Rye Beach House

When struck from the rear by another car, an automobile operated by Mrs. Harriet Hinds of Stoneham, Mass., crashed into the interior of a house owned by Archie Emery, Rye, in a bizarre accident Sunday afternoon.

No one in either car was hurt in the strange accident. Her husband and two children were riding with Mrs. Hinds at the time when her car went out of control after being struck by an auto driven by Miss Priscilla Louise Gobbi, Portsmouth, Miss Joan Gobbi and three men; Frank Maggi and Albert Peigherani, both of Roxbury, Mass and Gavin Cooper, Pawtucket, R. I., were in the Gobbi car.

Mrs. Hinds was driving up Ocean Boulevard toward Foye's corner when she started to turn around in the driveway of the Emery home. Just as she started to turn, her car was hit from the rear by the other car, went out of control and crashed through the new boarding in the unfinished Emery home, formerly a garage, which the owner has been rebuilding. The car crashed through the new clapboards. Mr. Emery had been working inside the house only a few minutes before.

"The Youngest," Philip Barry's very sensitive and appealing comedy of contemporary American life, is playing this week at the Farragut Playhouse at Rye Beach, New Hampshire, where it will be on view each evening through Saturday, August 2nd.

Carrying off top honors for his brilliant and sympathetic portrayal of the downtrodden "youngest" who eventually comes into his own is youthful George McConville who has already chalked up notable successes for his outstanding performances in New England theatres in such plays as "Ah, Wilderness", "Our Town" and "Disraeli". A native of Wakefield, Mass., Mr. McConville is a graduate of Leland Powers School of the Theatre in Boston, and before joining the Farragut Playhouse company, played with several summer stock groups. He has been seen at the Farragut this season in "Lady of Letters".

Playing opposite Mr. McConville is Mary O'Neil who recently received critical plaudits for her work in "Ladies in Retirement" at the Farragut. The supporting cast includes Eleanor Welch, Stanley Whitehead, Anne Appleton, Elizabeth Bohrer, Frederick Kidder and Joseph Warren.

Additional Unit At Camp Langdon

NEW CASTLE, July 30—Further strengthening of the garrison was accomplished at Camp Langdon with the arrival of 58 more men from the Fort Eustis Coast Artillery Replacement Center in Virginia. The fourth and smallest group to have arrived at the harbor defenses here in the last month when the 22nd Coast Artillery Regiment began to build up the enlisted personnel of its batteries, all of the new arrivals have covered a three-months' basic training course at Fort Eustis and now have been assigned to regular duties with the regiment stationed here.

As was true of the other groups to arrive at this station, the majority of the soldier-selectees are from New York City.

Don Ameche At The Colonial

Seldom does a motion picture come along with so many elements of grand entertainment as "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," which will receive its local premier at the Colonial Theatre in Portsmouth on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday next.

Adapted for the screen from the sensationally successful stage play of the same name, the motion picture version of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" co-stars Mary Martin and Don Ameche, with Oscar Levant, Rochester and Connie Boswell heading the all-star supporting cast.

"Kiss the Boys Goodbye" is a slick combination of hilarious comedy, tingling song hits and bright acting and is designed for top-notch entertainment for everyone.

The management of the Colonial Theatre announces that the picture that recently broke all records at New York's Radio City Music Hall, "Blossoms in the Dust," will be presented on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 10, 11, 12.

Co-starred for the first time since their memorable performance in "Cavalcade," Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard return to the Arcadia Theatre screen on Sunday in Columbia's "The Voice in the Night," action-flaming drama of the forbidden Freedom Radio, whose indomitable voice thundered defiance to hate-crazed tyranny.

"The Voice in the Night" is said to be a breathless account of the underground movement which nightly defied a thousand disasters to flash its message of courage to a fear-enslaved people.

Brook is seen in the new drama as a prominent physician, sickened by the tyranny about him; Miss Wynyard, as his wife, is a believer in the philosophy which results in terror.

Gene Autry's newest film, "Sunset in Wyoming," is the co-feature.

Clark Gable At Ioka

Combining the versatile talents of Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell as co-stars, MGM's "They Met in Bombay," coming to the Ioka Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 3, 4 and 5, is a romantic melodrama graphically keyed into international complications in the Orient.

With this headlined news front seething with intrigue and violence as their dramatic background, Gable and Miss Russell, as a pair of intrepid adventurers, are given wide latitude in bringing their unusual talents to the screen.

Gable's role is cut smartly to the dictates of his outstanding work as a two-fisted man of action. Here, as a one-time British army officer, he assumes with equal nonchalance the part of a clever modern crook operating in smart social circles.

Miss Russell forsakes zany roles to invest her versatile talents and charm in the unusual part of a feminine Raffles matching her cleverness with Gable's.

Their involved adventures are backgrounded in Bombay as the story opens. Colorful India, enhanced by the celebration of Empire Day, is divertingly pictured with it lavish display of festival garb and custom. The actionful panorama then takes the principals to sea and to Hong Kong for later episodes.

The teaming of Gable and Miss Russell is accented by the performances of Peter Lorre, Joseph Ralph, Edward Ciannelli, Matthew Boulton, Luis Alberni, Rosina Galli, Jay Novello and Reginald Owen.

Mary Adams Shop Growing Rapidly

From a shop with no established customers but many high hopes, the Mary Adams Candy Shop has developed into a thriving little store with an established mailing list of over 300 customers.

Based on the idea of presenting the best obtainable merchandise in a most attractive way, this shop has built up a reputation of being "different."

With over 60 kinds of fine hand-dipped chocolates, bonbons, creamy fudges and caramels, a complete selection of fine candies are offered at a reasonable price. During the summer, the fruit jellies, iced confections and dainty mints prove to be very popular.

A recent welcome addition has been a variety of Elmer Candy products, including peanut, cashew and pecan brittles, mint Bubiets, and pecan Pralines. These candies, coming to us from New Orleans, are a "Southern Confection with true Southern appeal." Vacuum-packed to preserve their marvelous fresh flavor—a new idea in candy merchandising.

Begun in a small store on Inn Street, Mary Adams Candies has just moved to an attractive modern son to whom goes credit for the success this new company at the Farragut is enjoying this season. One of the most attractive stage sets ever to form the background for this charming Barry comedy has been designed by Duncan Stuart, the talented young Oklahoma scenic artist to whom no stage assignment seems too difficult. Theatre-goers will not soon forget his unusual set for "Ladies in Retirement" recently presented at the Farragut.

New England's theatre-going public has taken to the idea by the Farragut Playhouse of using different colored lights to illuminate the huge playhouse sign on the roof as an indication of the type of play being currently performed—red for comedy, green for mystery and blue for drama. All next week, therefore, blue lights will give the Farragut's patrons a promise of tense drama in the form of Lillian Hellman's famous hit of two seasons, "The Little Foxes."

This important play, by the brilliant author of "Watch on the Rhine" has only recently been released for production by summer theatre groups and the Farragut Playhouse considers itself extremely fortunate to include this drama in its current schedule. It will open Tuesday evening, August 5th and will play each evening through August 9th.

Featured in the role made famous from coast to coast by Tallulah Bankhead, will be Elizabeth Bohrer, a permanent member of the acting group of the Farragut Playhouse who in this very difficult assignment will have another opportunity to display her rare versatility. In earlier productions this season Miss Bohrer has achieved notable triumphs for her work in the leading role of "Ladies in Retirement" and also in such plays as "Nothing But The Truth" and "The Youngest".

Also cast in a prominent part in "The Little Foxes" is (Miss) Jeff Donnell whose artistry in "Lady of Letters" endeared her to Farragut audiences and whose haunting performance in "Ladies in Retirement" will long be remembered.

The sports program will be conducted on the beach in front of the Ashworth hotel which will be the headquarters for the plumbers. A shore dinner will be served at the hotel at 1:30 o'clock followed by a brief speaking program. General bathing is on the program for the latter part of the afternoon.

The committee in charge consists of John R. Martin of Milford, J. Vincent Moran of Manchester, Bertrand G. Walker of Laconia, Joseph L. Greenwood of Bristol, Alfred Stevens of Manchester, Harry Bunker of North Conway, John H. Simpson of Durham, Manley Morgan and Ben Orr of Concord.

TERNS, GULLS —

within the last five years, it is earned.

The gulls formed their colony to the north of the Marine laboratory on Dutch island and now that the milliner is forbidden by law to use the brilliant plumage on hats, the rare species of gulls are increasing. About eight years ago the students noted the appearance of the great black back gull on the isles, the farthest place south they are known to come. They are a pretty, large bird, with a black back and brilliant white breast.

This is the first summer in over a decade that the birds are not watched carefully and new additions noted. They are carrying on at Isles of Shoals, though, even when their sympathetic friends must stay ashore.

Fair Question

When the prisoner was asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed on him, he replied:

"I'm sorry I took the money, my lord; but you know the old saying that the more a man has the more he wants.

The judge nodded understandingly.

"Well," he said, "you're getting 12 months. How much more do you want?"

Study Clams To Find Basis
For Revival Of Industry

People in this region of New Hampshire are well aware that the lucrative clam business is slipping and that something must be done quickly to save this distinctive New England delicacy, but it is such a massive and such a baffling problem, that no individual or no town can cope with it alone. So they are all welcoming the Biological Institute at the University of New Hampshire, with its plan to study the Great Bay clam for two years and to reseed clam flats where it is advisable.

The clam population has gone down rapidly in the last four or five years in areas which have not been overfished, which leads the university scientists, studying the problem under Prof. C. Floyd Jackson, head of the institute, to believe it is due to a chemical condition of the water.

They are working from the theory that sewerage pollution or waste from industrial plants along the several rivers emptying into Great Bay, even in minute forms, can poison clams whose entire body is submerged in water. Preliminary analysis, however, has revealed no sewerage pollution, a fact which is giving towns of this area great satisfaction for they fear that a change in handling sewerage would be a financial burden.

Stations Set Up

Clam stations are being set up this month, and 10 have already been established between Durham and the mouth of the Exeter river. These are observation posts where the clams will be treated by various methods, watched carefully and charted for two years. The chemical condition of the water will be determined at regular intervals along the bay and the effect of waste, such as chlorine from bleaching factories, oil used to control mosquitoes, will be studied in relation to the clam.

A study of the map of Great Bay with its numerous tributaries will show the difficulties of this problem. For instance, if a detrimental waste enters the bay far inland, the tide will carry this waste toward the sea for six hours and then the tide will turn, carrying the waste back up the bay and into all the tributaries, making it difficult to learn its source.

While this work is going on in Great Bay, clams will be raised at the U.N.H. laboratories under artificial conditions so that the scientists can study the life history and experiment with them under controlled conditions.

Scientists say that the clam in an (Continued on Page 13)

N. H. Companions
Of Forest At Beach

The New Hampshire Officers' association of Companions of the Forest of America held its quarterly meeting at the Hampton Beach Community hall Sunday, with delegates present from Manchester, Derry, Nashua, Peterborough, Claremont, Portsmouth and Exeter.

Miss Helen Gaffney of Claremont, grand chief companion, conducted the memorial service for the late Miss Annie Mahoney, a charter member of Constitution circle in Portsmouth. Mrs. Mary Maguire of Portsmouth, president of the association, presided.

Speakers included Mrs. Nellie Philbrick of Portsmouth, supreme deputy; Mrs. Mary Darling of Manchester, past grand chief companion; Miss Mae Cone of Nashua, Mrs. Mary Lyons of Portsmouth, past grand chief companion; Miss Helen Kurtz of Exeter, grand secretary, and Miss Gaffney.

It was planned to hold the next quarterly meeting in Manchester on the last Sunday in October with the Queen City circle as host.

interesting mollusk. The eggs are sexed and thrown off into the water where they are fertilized, forming a free swimming animal which does not resemble its parent for four or five years.

It settles down then on eel grass, sand, rocks, or vegetation in a less active stage to develop its shell. The clam which happens to be in the proper surroundings between the half tide and low tide level burrow down into the mud to grow into happy adulthood, but the millions who happen to grow their shells too far inland or in too deep water, perish.

The scientists hope to take these young larvae which are ready to burrow into the mud and plant them in suitable flats. The only difference in planting clams and potatoes, they explain, is that the clam does his own digging.

Professor Jackson and his assistants spent one day on Great Bay dredging in various depths of water to determine how far the clams go. These are the clams destined for destruction because they will not get the ebb and flow of the tide. This is the time of year they are changing from the free swimming form so the work must be speeded if the data are to be gathered.

The work is being directed by the institute and all the men and women spending hours on it are doing it voluntarily. They are hampered by lack of equipment, mostly proper boats to go from station to station, but they hope to get help through the Seacoast Regional Commission, headed by O. V. Henderson.

a junior in Hampton High, had just a slight edge over Cahill, who pitched this spring for the Yale freshmen, in that he allowed only three hits, two singles and a double, whereas the All Stars nicked Cahill for four bingles, three of them extra-base blows. Cahill, however, had eight strikeouts to his credit with Palmer close behind with seven.

The effectiveness of the pitching can be seen by a glance at the box score which shows that no outfielder on either team made a put-out during the six innings. A slim total of only 21 men faced each pitcher during the six innings and in the fifth inning Cahill struck out three men.

"Slugger" Bragg blasted out the longest hit of the game, a lusty triple to deep center field in the fifth, but was left stranded on third when Cahill fanned the next two batters. Tuck White was the big stickler, collecting a brace of doubles in three times at bat and driving in two runs.

Altogether it was one of the best played games on the local diamond this season and many fans have expressed their hopes of seeing young "Beep" Palmer and Bill Cahill hitch up again for a regular nine-inning affair.

Onmun Daymorn

Dull morning, just rain
Beating on a window pane.
And that's the way I felt this morning as I awoke to find a grey day greeting me, dull and drab What to do? Read? No. I didn't feel like reading. Dress up in old clothes and slosh around in the rain to seek some small adventure?
Well—I was turning the idea over in my mind when the telephone rang.
It was Mac, recently arrived from Boston, wanting me to show him the beach. "This afternoon?" he asked. Eagerly, but not too eagerly I assented for I have a soft spot for Mac in this organ that's called a heart. You see, it was he who taught me to trip the light fantastic and that required patience, I assure you.

HAMPTON, NEW HAMPSHIRE

In summer I go "casual". In other words, my hair goes straight and stringing, and I lounge around in playclothes most of the time.
I'm comfortable that way. But Mac was coming! I couldn't let him see me this way. I took a quick glance at myself in the mirror. I stopped then and, shocked, I took a long second look. My hair, oh, my hair, I groaned to myself, I've got to do something about it! I called up Evelyn's in Hampton and made an appointment for 10 o'clock for a shampoo and a wave.

Evelyn made me as presentable as she knew how, and considering the material (myself) she had to work with I thought she did a very good job. Nails manicured, facial and wave. I really splurged.
Mac was waiting in the lobby when I came back from Hampton.
"Hi!" he says and I could tell he was glad to see me, bless his honest heart. "Where to?" he then inquires.

"Lunch. I'm starved, Mac!" I laughed. He took the hint and we lunched together at Lorenzes.

A whole afternoon stretched before us. How to entertain Mac? We went bowling, or rather, he went bowling. I merely tossed the ball and wore a groove in the floor I lost my balance so frequently. Yes, I will admit, there really is a knack to bowling.

I was staggering around by the time we finished bowling four strings, so tired that I threw the ball more often down the gully instead of the alley.

And Mac, who was as fresh as a daisy and exhilarated by good bowling scores, finally heeded my pleas to stop.

"Dancing tonight?" he asked as he left me at the hotel.

I nodded with a feigned bright smile and relaxed for the next few hours.

We were dancing at last on the smooth floor of the Casino Ballroom. Gone was all weariness, lost in the sheer enjoyment of dancing to smooth melody as played by the Kearney-Kallander crew.

I didn't want the evening to end, but all evenings must come to a close.

"Bye, Mac" I said at the door.
"Bye," he said. "I had a grand time. See you next year?"
